Please join us in support of our community's future by attending the Florida TARP Forum on Feb. 18, 2009. Collectively, we will discuss the utilization of TARP Funds (Troubled Assets Relief Program) and the issues surrounding our country's financial health, more specifically, our own community's.

The Florida TARP Forum is a moderated leadership forum to discuss the utilization of TARP Funds (Troubled Assets Relief Program) and issues surrounding our country's financial health. In an effort to keep our community's financial institutions, businesses and families financially stable and prosperous in the coming years, banking institutions, the federal government and community leadership will support a broader understanding of both the complexity of this situation and the original and future intentions of TARP funds.

Our government is taking strides to ensure our lenders, the keystones of our financial system, are secure. The Treasury Department was empowered through the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 to invest billions, primarily through security purchase agreements, into qualified financial institutions. Beyond that agreement, there has been no consensus as to what the industry could or should do to spur economic stimulus.

Answers are scarce, and our community reels from the effects of the credit crisis. In order for the leadership of our community to better suggest solutions, we must convene to discuss and understand the dynamics involved.

The moderated Florida TARP Forum will include three primary sections:

1. Dissertation on the present financial health of the greater economy.
2. Moderated discussion between a panel of industry experts, regulators, lenders and our political advocacy.
3. Open-forum discussion between members of our community and invited guests
